He allowed only a few applicants to go upstairs. When any of these came down they were warned to go away without talking. They were told that if they were engaged they would be notified by mail.

One of the hangers on about the place said the extra precautions were taken after Mr. Quali had been visited by a gardleman from Mr. Flin'ts office. He said it had been reported that rome of Mello's men had been acting as spies in Quali's office, and that seamen who it was supposed had been engaged had been approached and asked to call at an address on Front street.

These circumstances are looked upon as bearing out the report among the employees on El Cid that Mello is planning to either capture the warship for himself or else disable her before she reaches Brazilian waters.

It is pointed out that a few traitors on board could cripple the machinery at sea without even being discovered or that a sufficient number of Mello's men, if not suspected, could put Capt. > Only Thirty-one of Them Went on Yesterday.

In regard to the third race at Clifton yesterday, here are two facts. On Sat-urday Dalsyrian, owned by W. H. Roier, started in a race. His opening price was 10 to 1. He went to the post at 20 to 1 and no takers. He got away badly, was ridden on the outside of his field all the way, and finished fifth. The master hand of J. Callshan, jockey, guided the black gelding. Yesterday was a differ-ent day. Dalsyrian opened at 6 to 1, was pounded all over the ring by a select coterie, and went to the post a fittle better than even money.

This time he did not get off badly, no was resumed before Recorder Smyth, in Part I. of the General Sessions, this Part I. of the General Sessions, this morning.

The evidence presented by the prosecution was to the effect that Hooker and Dozier had a quarrel two days prior to the murder. On Aug. 16 Hooker, urged by Martha E. Pell and T. L. Vogelsang, indicted as accessories, struck Dozier with a brick.

Deputy Coroner Donlin testified that the base of Dozier's skull had been fractured by a violent blow on the right side of the head.

Lawyer Hugh O. Pentecost, in opening was he scraped against the outer rails. He rushed right out, overtook Benjamin before three furlongs had been run, and won in a gallop by half a dozen lengths The two races furnish a strong chain of circumstantial evidence. In the absence of positive knowledg of sharp practice the writer will let readers sum up the case to their own satisfaction. The attention of the Clifton Jockey Club the head.

Lawyer Hugh O. Pentecost, in opening the case for Hooker, said that his client had used the brick as a weapon to defend himself against Dozier, who attempted to assault him. is also dirtected to the acrobatic form of Dalsyrian. The number of bookmakers at Clifton was further reduced yesterday. Only, thirty-one went on. This is the smallest number that any track has had during the year. The management can blame no one but themselves for this extraordinary state of affairs. The attempt to extort $3 for supplies made many of the Protestant Episcopal Church was opened this morning at St. Bartholobookies sore, and they will not so on even if business should prove to be very good. After the bookmakers had weighe in on Friday for two days, four others were permitted to go on Saturday. This kind of business is not at all relished by the pencillers.
